Hawker 750/800/900

From British Aerospace Corporate Jets and Beech Aircraft Corp through Raytheon to Hawker Beechcraft, the manufacture of the Hawker 800 derived from the British designed DH-125 that first flew in August 1962. The maiden flight of the 125 800 iteration took place in May 1983.

Hawker 800 variants comprise the 750, 850 and 900 plus their XPs.

The Hawker 800XP was certificated in 1995, with upgraded engines for better climb and cruise performance.

Further improvements in 2005 led to certification of the Hawker 850XP, which debuted at EBACE. It has winglets that have extended its operating range by 100 nm, upgraded avionics and a redesigned interior. The 850XP was certified for operation in March 2006.

The 750 and 900XP variants were announced in October 2006.

The Hawker 750 is a shorter range jet that shares the same fuselage and wings as the 800 series but with a larger cabin and with the ventral fuel tank repurposed for baggage capacity. It made its first flight on 23 August, 2007 and was certified on 19 February, 2008. Deliveries commenced later that year. It is powered by two Honeywell TFE731-5BR engines, each offering 4,660 pounds of thrust. Cabin volume is 551 cubic ft and a typical configuration features eight passenger and two crew seats.

The Hawker 900XP is powered by Honeywell TFE731050BR engines to boost range again.

Production had ceased by 2012.
